

Craig Shaul has been an analyst for the Idaho Department of Labor since 2007, joining right at the beginning of the chaos of the housing bubble burst and financial crisis. In 2012, he was promoted to Research Supervisor, and led the Bureau of Labor Statistics programs until 2015. Since then, he has led the Department's team of Labor Economists that are dedicated to providing insight on Idaho's economy and labor market.

Craig grew up in southwestern Idaho, graduated from Meridian High School and earned a bachelor's degree in Political Science and a Master's in Public Administration from Boise State University. Before joining the Idaho Department of Labor, he helped his family run a small restaurant supply business that served customers of the Treasure Valley and beyond. In his spare time, he enjoys travelling with his wife and studying ancient history.
